Monitoring Mobilities: Social Transnationalism, Inequality and European Integration from Below

Ettore Recchi

Professeur des université en sociologie

OSC

The international mobility of individuals – in physical and virtual forms – is a key feature of globalization. Through EU citizenship, cross-national mobility also lies at the heart of the European integration project. Its manifestations are plural – from migration to tourism to virtual forms of transnational interactions. But what are the integrative effects of such mobilities? And do they widen, counter or reproduce existing social inequalities?
